

Lancaster
Arts invites you to our autumn
2025 season
on Land

Hello everyone

A warm welcome back to our final season on what has proven to be an incredibly inspirational theme of Land.

Our cover image is from one of three exhibitions taking place in the Peter Scott Gallery this season, Louise Ann Wilson's Becoming Rock, a deeply personal perspective on our theme. Before that, we will welcome Are You Lost? from artist Rob St John, a sound, film and textile installation that we have taken to locations throughout the Forest of Bowland this summer as part of Nature Calling. Could We Dream in Colour..., a collaboration between artists James Fox and Dave Shooter is a political exploration of Land, leading us nicely into next year's theme, which we can exclusively reveal will be...Dissent.

We have another bumper concert programme for you with five fascinating and original performances, beginning with the UK premiere of a 'neurorecital' with pianist Nicolas Namoradze. We bring an exciting new collaboration with violinist Braimah Kanneh-Mason and pianist Jáms Coleman for a stunning musical programme that includes Dvořák's Songs My Mother Taught Me. Renowned clarinetist Emma Johnson brings an unusual and diverse programme that responds to our theme of Land and we finish the season with pianist Jonathan Ferrucci for An Evening with JS Bach. For those looking for something a little bit different, we welcome the multi- award-winning Czech chamber ensemble Trio Bohémo.

We will be partnering again with Lancaster Litfest to bring the UK's Poet Laureate Simon Armitage for On Land and Poetry. Sue Palmer and Sheila Ghelani's Atmospheric Forces comes to the Nuffield

Theatre for their unique performance with objects, a table and a talk about the interconnections in nature. This has limited seat numbers and will sell out fast.

Ali Matthews returns, this time, with Mushroom Language: A Fungal Gothic about the life cycles that shape us all through folk horror and humour.

As ever, there are plenty of free things to get involved with, both in our venues and out and about, but rather than put them all on page 3, as we have before, we have chosen to give them equal billing in the brochure so they have their own pages! These include the chance to help shape an Exhibition in a Day, and our usual artist conversations so read on to find out more and sign up to the mailing list as new events are added all the time.

Looking forward to seeing you!

Multi award-winning pianist and composer Nicolas Namoradze returns to Lancaster Arts, following his enchanting concert at Lancaster Priory in 2023.

Join us for the UK premiere of a unique concert, featuring video projection displaying what is happening in the pianist's brain during the performance. Explore what can be understood about these pieces of music and what it means to play them by looking 'inside' the inner landscape of Nicolas' mind.

Nicolas presents recital formats that reimagine the concert experience through a range of innovative projects, and furthers his postgraduate studies at the Institute of Psychiatry, Psychology and Neuroscience. The works in the second half of the programme mirror those in the first, opening with Scriabin's so-called "Insect" Sonata is an iconic exploration of nature, the earth and land, and the concert concludes with Nicolas' own arrangement of Ravel's celebrated Suite No. 2 from his ballet Daphnis et Chloé.

Nicolas came to international attention in 2018 upon winning the triennial Honens International Piano Competition in Canada. Among the most critically acclaimed musicians of his generation, he was bestowed the 2020 & 2021 Young Pianist Award by the UK Critics' Circle.

"Astonishing...[his playing] unfolding in an opalescent glow, every bar touched with beauty...exultant and never less than technically immaculate."

Rob St John: Are You Lost?

Exhibition

2 October-17 October
11am-5pm Monday-Friday
Peter Scott Gallery
Price: Free

Join us on 8 October for drop-in screen printing,
1-4pm, to create a unique memento of the installation.

Are You Lost? is a sound, film and textile artwork from artist Rob St John. The installation has spent the summer travelling through the Forest of Bowland and this is a unique opportunity to enjoy it here in Lancaster. What connects you to the Forest of Bowland?

Over the last year, Rob has been working with people in and around Bowland, exploring themes of environmental justice, land access and personal perspectives and connections to the landscape. The installation has been created through these conversations, and weaves together voices, field recordings and choral improvisations. The textile element is a collaboration with textile artist Kate O'Farrell, drawing upon the cotton mill weaving practices of East Lancashire and the textile traditions of Gujarat in India, alongside natural materials and processes derived from the Bowland landscape.

Are You Lost? is part of a national programme called Nature Calling, commissioned by the Forest of Bowland National Landscape and produced by Lancaster Arts.

Drop in 11am-5pm Friday

Drop in 10am-3pm Saturday

Peter Scott Gallery

Price: Free

Want to understand what goes on behind the scenes in the university art collection? Fancy helping decide what goes on display? Join us as we challenge ourselves to create an exhibition in a day. The exhibition, selected, curated and interpreted by you, will remain on display in our Manton Room.

This exhibition-making marathon is a drop-in affair so join us for as much or as little time as you like. If you join us Friday, you'll be more likely to be deciding themes and stories and selecting art works. If you join us Saturday, you'll be arranging, installing and interpreting. Or you can dip in and out both days.

We want you to help us share the hidden gems of the university art collection – and also to help us think about how to share them more effectively in future, including through getting the collection online.

This workshop is part of a project supported through a grant from Arts Council England via Museum Development North.

Email gALLERY@LANCASTERARTS.ORG if you have questions, ideas or want to know more.

Jan Vičar

Folk songs cycle 'From Moravia'

Multi award-winning Trio Bohémo make their Lancaster debut in the Great Hall with an evening that blends the worlds of contemporary classical and folk music.

The Czech trio has swiftly emerged as a force on the international chamber music scene and this evening's programme brings together vibrant voices from central Europe, past and present. Moving from Webster-Zuber's evocative Rhapsody to Schubert's luminous Notturmo and Rejcha's elegant Trio in A Major, offering contrasting glimpses of early Romantic lyricism. Dvořák's Trio traverses a vivid Slavic landscape encompassing everything from melancholy to joy, before Vičar's folk-inspired 'From Moravia' closes the programme with a modern reimagining of traditional song.

Founded in 2019, Trio Bohémo's rise has been remarkable, winning the prestigious Parkhouse Award in 2021 and first prize at the International Joseph Haydn Chamber Music Competition in Vienna in 2023. Their highly anticipated 2024 debut album received glowing 5-star reviews from BBC Music and Classica magazines and was selected as the Guardian's Classical Album of the Week.

Songs of Sea and Sky

Vaughan Williams

Studies in English Folk Song

Emma Johnson

Senegal Spirit

Benny Goodman

Medley

Lancaster Arts is delighted to welcome one of the UK's leading clarinetists, Emma Johnson, in concert with pianist John Lenehan.

The concert begins with virtuosic pieces from Mozart and Weber for both instruments, before a second half that responds to our 2025 theme of Land. Both Peter Sculthorpe's work rooted in the sounds of Saibai, an island near Papua New Guinea, and Vaughan Williams' music based on English folk songs, reflect the stories of people moving from land out to sea. Senegal Spirit pays homage to the traditional music of Senegal and the Benny Goodman Medley includes music redolent of the jazz scene in 1930s Chicago.

Described by The Times as "Britain's favourite clarinetist", Emma Johnson is one of the few clarinet players to have made a career as a soloist. Since winning the BBC Young Musician of the Year at the age of seventeen, she is known for her diverse repertoire. She was awarded an MBE by the Queen in 1996.

With more than 80 albums to his credit, reflecting an enormous variety of genres and styles, John Lenehan ranks as one of the most versatile pianists on the classical scene today.

"Johnson's musical charms include warm tone, superb musical taste and very sensitive phrasing, this was a debut that offered a lot of pleasure."

Sue Palmer and Sheila Ghelani: Atmospheric Forces

Performance: Theatre

4pm and 8pm
Friday 17 October
Nuffield Theatre
Tickets: £12-£16
Duration: 120 mins, including interval
Age: 12+

Limited capacity performances

Lancaster Arts welcomes back artists Sue Palmer and Sheila Ghelani as they turn over the interconnections between climate and geology, fuel and feelings, the strata and layers of atmospheres through performance and action.

This unconventional performance piece gives audiences the opportunity to arrive, look around and read, before Sue and Sheila perform along a table. This will be followed by a conversation between the audience, artists and two invited guests from other fields, ranging from scientists and local historians, to artists and activists.

Sue and Sheila have previously collaborated on Common Salt, which in Lancaster, was presented at the Maritime Museum in 2019 and was a show and tell about empire, nature and memory. This new piece builds on their practice and performance work.

"Sheila Ghelani and Sue Palmer know how to create an atmosphere. They are adept at the choosing and setting up of a space, the informal but artful welcome, the beautifully crafted gift."

Louise Ann Wilson: Becoming Rock

Exhibition

11am-5pm Monday-Friday
27 October-17 November

Price: Free

Louise will facilitate a creative drawing/mapping workshop aimed at women wanting to explore experiences of health related life-events on Tuesday 11 November, 3-5pm.

Season Celebration

Tuesday 11 November,
5.30pm
Peter Scott Gallery

Becoming Rock offers a deeply personal perspective on our 2025 theme of Land, exploring the artist's landscape-based responses to two recent major life-events: a radical hysterectomy resulting in surgical menopause and breast cancer which led to multiple surgeries.

Through photography, film, prints, and experimental drawings, Louise documents her experiences within rocky landscapes chosen for their physical, psychological, and metaphorical resonance, and encourages us to relate our own life experiences, whatever they may be, to the landscape.

Responding to her cancer diagnosis, the artist seeks out boulders where she films and photographs her body, making connections between the calcium rich limestone landscape and the 'calcification' occurring within her own tissue. Experiences of radical hysterectomy are sited in the dramatic slate-quarried landscapes of the Lake District, drawing parallels between the surgically quarried body and quarried land. A series of site-specific walks explore the effects of menopause using a process of walking and menopause map-drawing.

Please note this exhibition contains images relating to surgical procedures.

Join us for an afternoon of art and conversation on our 2025 theme of Land.

Over the past year, Lancaster Arts has been exploring the theme of Land with artists, researchers, community groups and with people whose lives and livelihoods are rooted in the landscape as well as those who may feel more disconnected. In recent months, we've hosted residencies with artists Kate Fox and Ellie Harrison alongside academics from Lancaster University, to see where their creative explorations and thinking might take them.

Across these residencies, compelling questions have emerged: What is our personal attachment to the landscapes around us? How do we find our place in a landscape, shape it and be shaped by it? What is the relationship between our inner landscapes and the physical ones around us? Join us for a meaningful, fun and creative exploration of your own connection with land, deepen your understanding of what land connection may mean for others, and gain insights into using creative processes to explore significant issues.

Please bring your own experiences of connections to the landscapes. Our partners artists and academics will share some of the questions and responses they have had to this theme in the last year.

Season Celebration

Tuesday 11 November,

5.30pm

Peter Scott Gallery

Lancaster Arts is proud to bring violinist, Braimah Kanneh-Mason and pianist Jâms Coleman to the Great Hall this autumn. In this new collaboration, two of the leading young musicians in England have come together to explore a beautiful and varied programme of music which pairs two dramatic sonatas with lyrical miniatures, that bridge tenderness, nostalgia, and quiet intensity.

Braimah is a member of the Kanneh-Mason Piano Trio and Kaleidoscope Collective. He has collaborated with artists such as Nicola Benedetti, Tom Poster, Priya Mitchell and the London Philharmonic Orchestra, regularly performing at prestigious festivals and venues in the UK and internationally including the BBC Proms, Wigmore Hall, Barbican Hall, and Kings Place.

Jâms Coleman performs as a solo pianist, chamber musician, and vocal accompanist. His deeply sensitive pianism and explorations of interesting repertoire have made him a regular feature of many festivals and venues such as the Aldeburgh Festival, BBC Proms, Wigmore Hall, The Royal Concertgebouw (Amsterdam), and LSO St Lukes.

“Braimah Kanneh-Mason’s musicianship was never less than superb, [and] what was equally impressive was the humility of his playing.”

Simon Armitage: On Land and Poetry

Literature

7pm Tuesday 18 November

Nuffield Theatre

Tickets: £12-£16

Duration: 100 mins, including interval

In partnership with Lancaster Litfest

We are very excited to welcome Poet Laureate Simon Armitage for our year on Land – how more perfect could an author be for this theme? The evening will celebrate two of his recent illustrated collections, Blossomise and Dwell, as well as his latest collection, New Cemetery.

Blossomise celebrates spring through haikus inspired by the Japanese blossom festival, and longer lyrical pieces, while Dwell could be seen as a plea for humans to slow down and reflect. New Cemetery starts with the conversion of a local beauty spot into a municipal graveyard, as Simon takes a series of walks round his West Yorkshire home, drawing the reader into a parallel neighbourhood of remembrance and celebration.

Simon will be joined for a conversation by poet, Kim Moore, the author of two prize-winning collections of poetry.

Simon Armitage is Poet Laureate of the UK and Professor of Poetry at the University of Leeds. His collections have received numerous prizes and awards and he writes extensively for television, radio and theatre, and is the author of novels and non-fiction best-sellers.

'As a poet, he manages to have it both ways – he is the man in the street (or man on the moor) and the possessor of sometimes rarefied language he makes his own'

Ali Matthews: Mushroom Language: A Fungal Gothic

Performance: Theatre

Friday 21 November

Nuffield Theatre

Tickets: £12-£16

Duration: 80 mins, no interval

Age: 16+

Post show conversation

Lancaster Arts is thrilled to welcome Ali Matthews back to the Nuffield Theatre for her latest show Mushroom Language: A Fungal Gothic.

They eat nappies

They eat toothbrushes

They eat bombs

They eat newspapers about how the world will end...

a species running slowly in parallel preaching change silently digesting muck into matter and back again.

This show is about the cycles that shape us – eruption, reproduction and decay, perfectly suited to our year on the theme of Land.

In an eerie and funny homage to folk horror, two human performers absorb and mimic 'mushroom language' through ritual and power dynamics. Who are these creatures, and what are the mushrooms trying to tell them? Mushrooms offer us a lens into a more sustainable future, but nature is hilarious and terrifying.

Ali Matthews is an artist working in performance, music and video and last toured to Lancaster Arts with The Witching Way, created with Leo Burtin, in 2019, following its premiere at the Royal Exchange in Manchester.

"Gleefully concentrates on how the unpleasant business of decomposition and rotting helps to promote a cycle of rebirth after death"

James Fox and Dave Shooter: Could We Dream in Colour...

Exhibition

24 November – 8 December
11am-5pm Monday-Friday
Peter Scott Gallery
Price: Free

On 4 December, James and Dave will join us for an evening of debate, disruption (and maybe even some dancing) as we look back on a year of considering land, and look forward to our 2026 theme, Dissent.

For a final exploration of our 2025 theme Land, Could We Dream in Colour..., a creative investigation into the politics of land use and ownership, explores the complicated relationship between land, power and belonging that underpin our everyday geographies. Using creative tactics, this collaboration between James Fox and Dave Shooter disrupts the idea that land is only something to be measured, owned, or enclosed.

Working across sound, embroidery, print, and film, Could We Dream in Colour... challenges our ideas about land; as property, as resource, as environment. Through acts of creative re-mapping, the works disrupt both visible and invisible borders.

It is also a proposal. The work gestures toward alternative ways of experiencing place and lays the foundation for more inclusive, just, and communal ways of being in and with the world. In doing so, Could We Dream in Colour.... points toward the possibility of a 'Romantic Revolution' of the land through creative action and political re-imagination.

James Fox is an artist and researcher engaged with alternative histories and possible futures.

Dave Shooter/Guerrilla Biscuits is a sound artist and musician working primarily with field recordings gleaned from an area to curate place-based immersive sonic journeys.

Jonathan Ferrucci: An Evening with JS Bach

Concert

Great Hall

Tickets: £12-£23

Duration: 85 mins, including interval

Concert Programme:

Bach

English Suite no. 2 in A minor

English Suite no. 4 in F major

Bach

English Suite no. 3 in G minor

English Suite no. 6 in D minor

We warmly welcome Jonathan Ferrucci's return to Lancaster after his enchanting concert at the Priory in 2020, this time to the Great Hall for an evening of Bach.

The English Suites are a collection of six suites for keyboard by J.S. Bach and known for their complex musical structures. While the name suggests an English connection, it's more likely a reference to their form, which shares similarities with French keyboard suites. Following the release of his debut album of the complete Bach Toccatas earlier this year, Jonathan wanted to continue his exploration of Bach with the more organised structures of the English Suites, which he will record in 2026.

Italian-Australian pianist Jonathan Ferrucci has given concerts as a soloist and chamber musician across Europe, Australia and the United States, performing in Wigmore Hall, Barbican Hall and Kings Place in London, Carnegie Weill Hall in New York and the Fazioli Concert Hall in Italy, among other venues.

"Those who play this music almost have to blend in with the composer, [...] Ferrucci manages to do this. [...] Bach is something like his daily bread. Play it, hear it, breathe it.

Artists in Conversation

1pm Tuesdays
Free, please book

Meet artists making exciting work across a range of media

In person in the Jack Hylton Room, Great Hall Complex

In partnership with Lancaster University School of Arts

For our autumn 2025 season, we're rethinking our free artist talk programme to place a greater emphasis on dialogue. Artists making exciting work across a range of media will be joined by researchers or those working in relevant fields to discuss the ideas, themes and questions driving their work. There will be plenty of opportunity for the audience to join in the conversation and connect with artists working in our region and beyond.

Rebecca Chesney
7 October
In person

Rebecca's work is concerned with how we perceive land: how we romanticise, translate and define it. She looks at how politics, ownership, and commercial value all influence our surroundings, investigates the impact of human activities on nature, and considers how our understanding is fed by a confused mix of truth and fiction. Her works take the form of installations, interventions, habitat creation, drawings, maps and walks.

Sophie Mahon14 October*In person

Sophie Mahon is a socially engaged artist and producer whose multidisciplinary practice spans film, interactive arts, sculpture, and installation. Their work is rooted in close collaboration, responding to a range of social, political, economic, and environmental issues, with a focus on creating inclusive spaces that encourage open dialogue, collective creativity, and points of connection within communities.

Louise Ann Wilson11 November*In person

Louise creates site-specific walking-performances, installations, films, and photographic images that situate life-events in rural landscapes—with transformative outcomes. Intersecting art and medicine, her practice has addressed breast cancer and surgery, hysterectomy and surgical menopause, terminal illness and bereavement, in/fertility, and childlessness-by-circumstance.

Artists in Conversation

Emily Alice Mitchell

18 November

In person

Emily is a multidisciplinary artist based in London. Working across moving image, photography, printmaking, and sculpture, she explores themes of grief, identity, and transgenerational trauma. Drawing from her mixed Caribbean, English, and Scottish heritage, Mitchell reimagines memory and belonging, challenging colonial narratives and honouring erased histories.

Debbie Yare

25 November

In person

Debbie's art comes out of an embodied dialogue with Morecambe Bay. She researches how ever-changing ecosystems such as salt marshes and estuaries have been suppressed through human activities and, in turn, how they can reshape and inform our responses to climate change. She works across media in photography, video, drawing, writing, performance and socially engaged practice.
